HOW TO DISCUSS YOUR ESTATE PLAN AROUND THE THANKSGIVING DINNER TABLE

Thanksgiving is a time to reflect on what matters most: family, gratitude, and the legacy we hope to leave behind. While discussing estate planning may feel uncomfortable, the holiday gathering can be a meaningful opportunity to begin the conversation with your loved ones.

Start with your wishes, not the paperwork. Explain why protecting your family, honoring your wishes, and planning for the future are important to you. Discuss key topics such as wills, trusts, powers of attorney, and who you would want to make decisions on your behalf if you become unable to do so.

Keep the conversation open and comfortable. Choose a relaxed moment, invite questions, and give everyone time to share their thoughts. You do not need to make every decision at the dinner table. The goal is simply to start a conversation that can continue later.

Give your family the gift of preparation. A thoughtful estate plan can help provide clarity, reduce uncertainty, and ensure your wishes are understood.

This Thanksgiving, consider making legacy planning part of your family's conversation. At Grissom Plummer Law, PLLC, we can help you take the next step toward protecting what matters most.

Your Legacy. Our Commitment.

The Last Act of Love: Giving Your Family Peace of Mind This Christmas

Christmas is a season of love, generosity, and caring for the people who matter most. While we often show our love through gifts and family traditions, one meaningful way to care for our loved ones is to plan ahead for the future—including funeral and memorial arrangements.

Give your family the gift of peace of mind. Making your funeral and memorial wishes known in advance can help your loved ones understand how you would like to be remembered. It can also ease some of the uncertainty and difficult decisions families may face during an already emotional time.

Start the conversation today. Consider discussing your preferences with your family, documenting your wishes, and exploring available planning options. Taking these steps ahead of time can help ensure your wishes are understood and give your loved ones greater clarity when they need it most. Planning ahead is not about focusing on goodbye—it is about expressing love, providing guidance, and caring for your family even in the future.

This Christmas, consider making thoughtful plans that reflect your wishes and help your loved ones feel supported.

At Grissom Plummer Law, PLLC, we believe that planning for the future is one more way to show the people you love how much they mean to you.

Your Legacy. Our Commitment.
